DISCOVER BODY OF FISHERMAN IN THE HARBOR

Later Identified by Relatives as That of William T. McNair—Last Seen
Alive on Sunday

The body of William T. McNair, 60 years old, was found floating in the inner harbor shortly after noon yesterday. It was not until late last night, that the body was identified at the undertaking rooms of Willard S. Pike, by relatives.

Yesterday, shortly after noon, William D'Entremont, a member of the crew of the yacht Illyria, while coming up the harbor in a motor boat, sighted the body floating a short distance from the westerly end of Five Pound Island. Hastening ashore to the United Sail Loft, D'Entremont notified the police station, and Officers C. L. O'Maley and Flaherty were sent to the scene.

While Officer O'Maley was telephoning to Base 7 for a picket boat, Officer Flaherty went in D'Entremont's boat, made a line fast around the body, and towed it to the Pew machine shop wharf. Dr. Ira B. Hull, medical examiner, ordered the body removed to Pike's undertaking rooms, for further examination, where it was found that McNair had been rendered unconscious by a blow, caused by a fall from a wharf and striking against a vessel or fender log, it is believed, in which condition he suffocated, his body floating off with the morning tide.

There was a slight wound over the right eye, and several small scratches on the forehead and one side of the face, but from a superficial examination, it could not be determined whether the skull was fractured or not. The time of the man's death is placed as between Sunday night and Monday morning, as he was last seen about his usual haunts on Sunday evening.

N. F. Cod News.

The foreign markets are quiet and the outlook is anything but promising. The local supplies of last year's catch are landed, but the markets abroad are well supplied. The world catch is as large as last year but the consuming quantity is less; lower prices of sugar in the West Indies, of coffee and rubber in South America, dried fruits in Brazil and other world economic troubles are making it difficult for dried fish consumers to maintain their usual purchases. A month ago the indications were that the European catch would be small, but such is not now the case as the Norwegian catch is as large if not more than a year ago, while the Icelandic catch is fully 100,000 quintals in excess of this time last year. The situation is anything but encouraging, as over supplies and falling prices seem to prevail everywhere. It is too early yet to predict what the price of new fish will be in the foreign markets, but it is not early to impress on the fishermen, and to impress it strongly, the absolute necessity of making the best fish possible. If ever Newfoundland needed to turn out a good article it is this year. Fishermen, makers and merchants should unite wholeheartedly to market nothing but the best.—St. John's Trade Review.

Salmon Prices Low.

Fresh salmon have sold at low prices in sympathy with commodity prices in general. Eastern salmon sold to wholesale dealers on the week-end at 22 to 25 cents per pound as compared with 30 cents per pound in the corresponding week last year. Western salmon have been in good supply, the last arrivals selling to wholesale dealers at 20 cents per pound for trap Kings, 16 cents for ocean and 14 cents for silver.

COATED TONGUE.

"Dear Doctor: What is it that causes stomach distress and coated tongue, despite all the care taken to prevent it? I eat only wholesome foods—fruits, vegetables, butter, cream, etc.—observe all the rules for health, yet that stubborn digestive organ will not function properly. I suffer almost constantly from lack of appetite, gas, nausea. I am normal all right. Please don't advise me to go to a doctor; I have been to several, but they can't seem to trace the cause. MISS K."
